THE South-
Carolina GAZETTE.
June 4th, 1753. [NUMB. 990.]

MADRID, Jan. 13.

WE have a very good proſpect of ſucceſs in our endeavours to raiſe manufactures, a maritime force, and good ports. A book of inſtructions is already framed for the woollen weavers, and a code of laws is forming for their encouragement. Schools are erected for teaching the principles of navigation and ſhip building, and at the ſame time the works go on at Carthagena with as much vigour as if the fleet of an enemy was upon the coaſt.

Stockholm, Feb. 6. In conſequence of the reſolution taken in the laſt diet, the land forces of this kingdom are to be kept up to 94,000, and the maritime to 26 ſhips of the line, 70 galleys, and 20,000 ſeamen.

Berlin, Jan. 20. In conſequence of an order of the king addreſſed the 26th ult. to the generals and officers belonging to the department of Sileſia, they ſet out this day in order to join their reſpective regiments.

Stockholm, Jan. 19. The French embaſſador has lately received bills of exchange to a very conſiderable amount. Part of which it is ſaid is intended to be employed in buying up timber for building men of war.

London, Feb. 3. They write from Munſter, that their recruiting officers are diſperſed all over the country, raiſing men with all poſſible diligence, in order to compleat the troops of that biſhoprick.

From Duſſeldorp we hear, that they continue to raiſe great numbers of recruits in the dutchies of Juliers and Bergues, to complete the regiments quartered there; and they aſſure, that the prince of Deux Ponts is to come to review them ſome time next month.

Feb. 22. Several articles of importance, that came by the laſt French mail, demand confirmation before they are made known in other countries.

If we may credit the ſtrongeſt aſſurances, the next ſpring is like to prove a ſeaſon for camps.—The Turks are to form two; the Ruſſians, one, the Danes, one, the Pruſſians, two; the Auſtrians, two; the Hanoverians, one; the Saxons, one; and the French perhaps more than one. As all arm in defence of the general tranquility, who will dare to diſturb it?

Feb. 24. The princeſs Amelia, and two other men of war, are ordered to be rebuilt at Chatham.

Feb. 27. New inſtructions have been ſent to the Britiſh commiſſaries at Paris, in order to renew the thread of their conferences upon the ſubject of regulating the limits of the two nations in America; and as they have orders to declare to thoſe of his moſt chriſtian majeſty, that the Britiſh nation is far from being deſirous of appropriating to itſelf what belongs to others, it's hoped that the court of France, guided by the ſame principles, will approach nearer than they have hitherto done to the principal object of the commiſſion.

It is ſaid that the court of Berlin intends to ſet up a Weſt as well as an Eaſt India company, which is to take place as ſoon as the treaty of commerce is regulated at Madrid.

They write from Breſlaw, that the officers who daily arrive there have begun to make preparations for the camp which is to aſſemble in that province in the ſpring: But as to the motive for forming the camp, they know of no other at preſent than that of exerciſing and keeping the troops in motion, as it is the cuſtom annually of his Pruſſian majeſty, in ſome part of his dominions.

We learn from Berlin, that the enterpriſing king of Pruſſia is reſolved to ſend a buſs or two to fiſh for herrings at Shetland and Yarmouth next ſeaſon; his majeſty having penetrated into the advantages ariſing from ſo noble a branch of trade, 3000 barrels of herrings being annually conſumed in the city of Berlin only.

March 10. The treaty of commerce between the court of Madrid, and that of Pruſſia, is concluded, and will ſpeedily be publiſhed.

We hear that there will be a tax of 20 s. a year laid on the keepers of every dog

We hear from Copenhagen, that the troops which are to be encamped in the ſpring will not exceed ten thouſand men, and that the principal reaſon aſſigned for encamping them is that the court has received certain intelligence, that moſt of the neighbouring powers have taken a like reſolution. As the camp will be in the vicinity of this capital, ſome people are inclined to beleive that one if not more foreign ſquadrons may make their appearance this ſummer in the Baltick.

A bill is ordered into parliament for encouraging induſtry in this kingdom.

We hear that a proclamation will be iſſued to oblige the natives of theſe kingdoms, who are employed in building ſhips, &c to return home in ſix months.

And that a bill is to be offered this ſeſſion to make it felony for any Britiſh ſhip builder employ'd in foreign ſervice, who does not return in a time limitted.

The rev. Mr. Whitefield, is erecting a ſpacious new building near the Barking Dogs, where the old tabernacle ſtood.

It has been generally expected that ſome ſteps would be taken towards recalling Britiſh ſubjects from foreign ſervice, eſpecially ſuch whoſe labour abroad may prove pernicious to their country: But inſtead of that, we have the pleaſure to find, that if Foreigners want more hands to raiſe their navies to a level with ours, we can ſpare them a freſh ſupply, without any danger or detriment to ourſelves; witneſs the number of ſhip carpenters lately diſcharged, which is as follows: At Portſmouth 98, at Plymouth 145, at Chatham 74, Woolwich 58, at Deptford 68, Sheerneſs 63; in all 442, beſides a great many other artificers in his majeſty's yards and docks. From whence we may reaſonably conclude, that the peace of Europe reſts on a ſolid foundation, even ſo high, as to be ſcarcely diſcernable with the help of a teleſcope.

According to a private letter from Marſeilles and Toulon, repeated orders have been received to have all the veſſels building and repairing, at the laſt mentioned port, ready to put to ſea by the firſt of May, which occaſions a variety of ſpeculations, more eſpecially conſidering the great aſſiduity with which the Spaniards are arming and fortifying in Catalonia, and the pains they have taken to render Barcelona the ſtrongeſt place in all the Mediterranean. A camp is alſo to be formed under it's cannon in the ſpring.

March 13. We hear that the parliament have ſo much buſineſs before them, that they will not riſe before the beginning of May.

March 14. Some private letters from Spain intimate a conſiderable embarkation at Barcelona in the ſpring.

March 15. It is ſaid, that 16,000 l. will be granted towards the ſupport of the forts and ſettlements on the coaſt of Africa.

March 22. Letters from Plymouth give an account, that 12 men of war are now building at Ferrol, ſeveral of which have their decks laid. Their names are, Buedeux, Glorioſo, Guenixe, Tobenano, Colh, Oriente, Agiton, Magnanime, Neptune, Gallande, Brillante, and Hector. They are all of 68 guns, the length of the gun deck of each is 144 feet, and the breadth 46 feet. The ſame letters mention, that 8600 men are now employed in the dock at Ferrol.

March 27. Letters from Berlin and Franckfort adviſe that a negociation is on foot between the court of Berlin and Heſſe-Caſſel, for taking 6000 Heſſians into the pay of his Pruſſian majeſty.

We hear from Conſtantinople, that the Port intends to remain

The Edinburgh, Capt. Raſſel, was ſpoke with on the 19th of April, in the Lat. 41° 30' Long. 38° 40' Weſt from London, all well on board.

main no longer an unconcern'd ſpectator of the affairs of Perſia; that they are making diſpoſitions for aſſembling an army of 50,000 men in the neighbourhood of Bagdat: The Grand Signior held a divan in the beginning of January, when ſeveral reſolutions were taken on the ſubject; and in particular it was reſolved to lay an extraordinary tax on all eſtates, which is ſeldom or ever done, but when the Porte intends to engage in a war.

Letters from Marſeilles adviſe, that they are buſy, night and day, in that and other ports of Provence, taking biſkets, ſalting beef and pork, and getting other ſea proviſions in readineſs; from whence they conjecture that a ſquadron is to be fitted out in the Mediterranean this ſummer.

We have the pleaſure to inform the public, that 45 ſail of ſhips are now fitting out in the river for the Greenland fiſhery; a branch of trade of the greateſt importance to the welfare, as well as the naval force, of this kingdom, and may juſtly be called a darling ſiſter to the Britiſh fiſhery.

March 31. The writ from Paris, that the negociation which has been ſo long carrying on there between the Engliſh and French commiſſaries, for reconciling the pretenſions of the reſpective courts to ſome lands in America, has met with freſh inſtructions, which were entirely unforeſeen, and will, probably, retard the completion of that negociation.
